Just as it takes time to develop the mature personality of an individual, so does it take years to develop the personality of a school. From its inception and through its years of growth, Hickory High has formulated a personality that is both distinctive and unique. The intervening years have traced the development of H.H.S. from a school without traditions to a school with hallowed customs and familiar patterns. For fifty years, the HICKORY LOG has recorded the story of this growing, changing institution and its student body. Each class has had its own personality, the composite contribution of its individual members. Each has made an imprint on the face of the school, has established its laws, written and unwritten, its ideals, and its dreams. On its Golden Anniversary, the LOG views the personality of H.H.S. and of the students who each year add new dimensions to a heritage, already rich and meaningful.

Hickory High Has A Multi-Faceted Personality

Crowds of students come and are blended into the unity of their common pursuits, yet they laugh and cheer and study and learn, not as a single mass but as thirteen hundred individuals. They converge upon Hickory High School, and as they depart by a thousand divergent paths, they leave their mark upon the personality of the school — a fresh idea, an organized club, a newly-initiated custom. They give of themselves and gain much in the process, as they assimilate the ideals, the enthusiasm, the knowledge, and the aspirations of their high school.

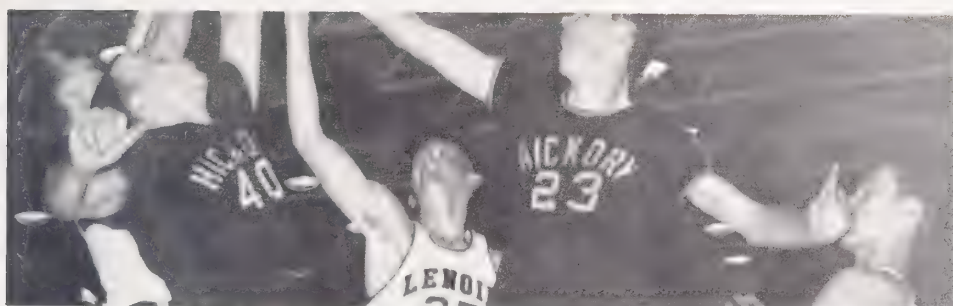

Searching, they find a world which moves to the tune of "Dixie," cheers for the Tornadoes, sweats over semester exams and college boards, salutes the maroon and gold colors, and fights for those all-important athletic championships. Their world is made unique by a school song and a favorite cheer, an aging building and a modern language lab, a superior band and a prize-winning publication, a record-holding sprinter and an excellent teacher. Classes and steadies, tests and dances, books and ball games fill this teen-age world which is punctuated with the unexpected, despite its ordered routine. This is a place for fun, for friends, for growing pains — a place for belonging.

THE BLUE AND GRAY colors of the Tornado band uniforms, reflect Hickory High's southern heritage. Band members proudly sound the notes of "Dixie."

THE FAMILIAR FACE OF H.H.S. has long been associated with the many intangibles that constitute the heart of the school.

ENTHUSIASM FOR athletics is visible on players' faces and in school standings.

PRIVILEGED WITH an open lunch, seniors congregate at the Community Center.

LESS GRASS, more cement—less space, more students; this is H.H.S.'s changing face.

Evolution of Hickory High's Campus

In the past forty years, Hickory High has grown from a one-building school into a complex of structures and steps and sidewalks. The dates of construction are included in this Golden Anniversary LOG as a record of the school's continual progress.

High School — A Give and Take Relationship

SEEN FROM THE SCHOOL, the church symbolizes the heritage which exerts a strong influence on Hickory's youth.

We were the school's before the school was ours, for its influence throughout the years of its existence has greatly affected the world into which we, the students of today, were born. Our parents and their parents before them came to this school, were shaped and molded by it, and then went on to change the worlds of which they found themselves a part. We are a portion of this great cycle of which H.H.S. is an integral part. The school instills in us the qualities of leadership and cooperation which will eventually profit our community just as they benefit us. Athletic events, school plays, concerts, and the service projects of school organizations augment civic activities and provide students with valuable experience in democratic living. Each one of us will leave this, our school, an infinitely changed and matured person, and our community and our children, the students of tomorrow, will profit because of the years we have spent here.

Dedicatee Epitomizes Excellence in Her Work

Miss Lena Greever

STRESSING PRECISION in geometric patterns, Miss Lena Greever instills in her students the importance of care and exactness in all of their work.

"Genius is nothing but a great aptitude for patience."

Dedication

Dedicatee is a master craftsman — a teacher who molds, and drills, and inspires the very best in her students. As they leave Geometry classes, she may never see them again, but others, seeing these students will see her and know that they are the product of a workman who need not be ashamed.

Longer than any other teacher at Hickory High, she has seen students coming and going, measured their successes and their failures, counselled and guided, and unfailingly has paced the growth of her math students with the changing times. During her years as Beta Club adviser, she upheld the school's standards of academic excellence, and through her coaching of Junior Marshals, graduation has annually been a flawless performance.

In the classroom, her image is one of sincere interest and humility. She requires perfection of her students and demands no less of herself. The thoroughness of her teaching renders her students well-prepared for more advanced courses. Her active interest in her students is made evident by her regular attendance at Hickory High's basketball and football games, plays and talent shows.

On each of her students she leaves a lasting impression, for she is a teacher who embodies all that is best in the traditions of Hickory High School. To you, Miss Lena Greever, we dedicate our 50th Log.

School Board

Attention focuses on the business at hand as the chairman of the Hickory School Board calls the monthly meeting to order. On the shoulders of these eight administrators rest the educational problems of the school system. The ultimate authority on everything that touches school life, these non-paid citizens arbitrate disputes, wrestle with budgets, and consider long range plans as well as immediate problems.

Last year the school board authorized personnel from George Peabody College to make an exhaustive study of the Hickory city schools. With the aid of these findings, which were made public this fall, the present system can be greatly improved.

SEEING A PROBLEM from all viewpoints is one of the responsibilities of these civic-minded citizens. Mrs. Fletcher Clayton holds the attention of the other School Board members as she points out that a hasty decision would only create new and more complex difficulties, as the board prepares for important Southern Association evaluation.

LISTENING TO THEIR SPEAKER with open-minded attentiveness, Dr. Jenkins and Everette Eckard weigh suggestions.

MR. COTTRELL STARTS the new school year right by presiding over the annual Hickory High "book passing-out ceremony." An enormous task, the distribution of text books to each teacher takes hours of work in order to keep an accurate count of the number of books on hand. Hickory High School students and teachers depend on Mr. Cottrell to be an authority on all phases of high school life — from daily lunch schedules to important graduation procedure, from classroom activities to football games.

Principal Has Multifaceted Job, Responsibility

Principal

Far more important than the rudiments of pencil, paper, and books is the enlightened position of principal. He must have a storehouse of knowledge—of past experiences and of formal education. It is his duty to prepare his students for life, whether they will continue their studies or will enter the fast progressing business world. From the hours spent in school, students must learn to respect authority, to assume responsibility, and to live in a democracy.

Mr. W. D. Cottrell, now in his thirty-second year as principal of H.H.S., must deal with a multitude of problems. These range from reprimanding teen-aged offenders to signing diplomas. Recognized for his familiarity with numerous subjects, Mr. Cottrell is often called upon to lecture in various classes. Due to this close touch with his students he is better able to lead them and to fill his position as principal of Hickory's Claremont Central High School.

IN CHARGE of the rapidly growing Claremont Central High School, Mr. W. D. Cottrell, principal, finds that his responsibilities have multiplied with the increased enrollment this year. He must play a dual role, both as a disciplinarian and as a friend and helper.

Office Staff and Aides Unravel Knotty Problems

"I BELIEVE SOMEONE FORGOT to turn in a deposit slip," comments Mrs. Helen Klasset when she cannot balance the school's books, her responsibility as treasurer. Sixth period finds her busily adding and subtracting to keep the important records accurate.

WHEN SCHOOL IS OVER and the busses are loaded, Mr. Troy Washam plays the role of H.H.S.'s traffic policeman.

Office Staff

Truly the heart of the school, the Hickory High School office, is a bustling place. Absentee lists, telephone calls, school correspondence, bus driver supervision, permanent records, blue sheets, and invoices are only a few of the many tedious responsibilities which fall on the shoulders of the office staff. Work begins early as an influx of students must be given excuses. "Pink slips" then give way to morning announcements, and morning work ends with supervision of lunch-time detention hall. Sixth period brings an hour of deposit slips and purchase requisitions, and the 3:30 bell means busses must be sent on their way. Composed of the assistant principal, secretary, and school treasurer, as well as student assistants, the staff is always available to help students, teachers, and visitors to H.H.S.

A TEMPERMENTAL MIMEOGRAPH MACHINE teaches Mr. Bruton that some women, like H.H.S. secretary, Mrs. Phyllis Shuford, are not really so helpless.

TAKING OVER THIS YEAR as full-time counselor, Mrs. Reese is called on more and more for information and advice in all types of problems.

ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT tasks, processing college applications, keeps Mrs. Havnaer (above) and Mrs. Turpin busy during the "rush" season.

Guidance

Whether his problem stems from family troubles or college applications, the H.H.S. student can find the assistance he needs in the guidance department. Boasting one full-time and two part-time counselors, H.H.S. is constantly enlarging and improving its guidance program to meet the growing needs of its students.

This department is responsible for numerous events during the year. College Day for seniors is held in December, and gives students a chance to talk with representatives from various colleges and universities. The Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test and Merit Scholarship Qualifying Tests are administered by the guidance department. Counselors also help arrange schedules and process college applications.

Counseling Program Paces Ever-Growing Needs

MOUNTAINS OF WORK for H.H.S. guidance counselors result from various standard tests which must be checked and recorded. Here Marsha Grove takes the SCAT test which is administered to all juniors by the guidance department.

BARRICADES OF BOOKS surround Larry Brammer as he works diligently on a report for his English class. Like most other Hickory High students, he has learned that the best place to find needed material is in the research room of the library.

EAGER TO HELP, Mrs. Willis finds material which Troy Barger has overlooked.

Library

Development of the new library into an active school instructional center is now in its third year at Hickory High. A busy place, the library houses a collection of books, reference materials, and audio-visual equipment for use by students and teachers. The library's relaxed atmosphere is needed throughout the school year for browsing, study, or just "creative thinking." Students, with the help of librarians and the student library assistants, collect available information through the combined use of card-catalogues, newspapers, Reader's Guide, and in various reference materials.

Library Is a Place to Study, Read, Ponder

JIMMY LITTLE discovers that the quietness of the library stimulates thought.

IN THE FRESH air, the school steps give Albert Reed a minute of rest.

Maintenance

"You may be dismissed for lunch." This announcement sends a mad rush of hungry teenagers to the lunchroom. The schedule of two lunch periods creates a demanding job for lunchroom workers who must spend hours of preparation to serve hot, nourishing meals.

Another group of workers strives to create a pleasant environment for H.H.S. students. Working before the first bell rings in the fall and after everyone has left for summer vacation, the janitors and maids provide the school with neat, clean facilities.

Foreign, Ancient

PROPER INTONATION and development of pronunciation is important in learning a foreign language. Language lab facilities help Gary Phelps improve his French.

AS "PEDRO" AND "ELENA" converse, Bill Grant and Sylvia Blair acquire a better understanding of Spanish. By memorizing and performing dialogues, language students learn every-day expressions and improve their understanding of colloquialisms.

MANIPULATING THE CONTROLS, Miss Adelaide Shuford conducts a French class in the language laboratory.

Language Department

"How small the world is!" goes the expression that is heard so often today. For this reason it is becoming more important for a student to take an interest in a language other than his own. The language department at H.H.S. offers Latin, French, and Spanish. Through the study of each language, including customs, culture, and history, students gain an understanding of the country and its people. Facilitating the study of languages, the language lab is being used even more this year. Another rather new feature is the sister school in Toulouse, France. This program was initiated by the French Department, but has become a project of the entire school.

GETTING RIGHT INTO his work, Joe Hardy writes frantically in order to complete his English essay before the end of the period. Expository themes which must be written in class give students experience in organizing and expressing their thoughts.

English Department

MAKING A FINAL inspection, Mrs. Allison prepares to leave for an English teachers convention in Cleveland, Ohio.

Comprehensive reading, expository writing, expressive speaking, and listening are the important phases covered by the English department at H.H.S. Although basic grammar is important, literature, and oral and written work is especially stressed. Advanced senior classes include world literature in their studies, while advanced juniors remain within the realm of American literature. Writing labs develop student abilities in creativeness, and participation in discussions is encouraged. Practical English—the aspects which will be valuable in daily life — is emphasized in the regular English classes.

To make the English program more effective and to achieve continuity among grades, the English Teachers' Council becomes even more important each year. Representatives of the council attend conferences to share ideas and to bring back new plans for the English department at Hickory High.

STUDENTS' QUESTIONS are not always easy to answer, Miss Jean Ball discovers.

"I STILL DON'T BELIEVE that two plus two can equal ten," insists senior Ray Turner to Mrs. Rufty, who has just explained a number system based on four.

Math Department

In September take a cluster of doubtful students and a patient teacher. Add a year of mathematics. In May the result is one of success or failure, of pride or disappointment. Each student determines his own progress by the amount of time and effort he applies. Whether he is studying basic math, Algebra I, Algebra II, Algebra III, contemporary geometry, or solid geometry and trigonometry, the student develops the accuracy and logical reasoning which mathematics requires.

Basic math, new at Hickory High this year, is a course similar to general math which is taught on junior high level. It is designed for students who need further training before attempting difficult math, or for those who are interested in the practical application of mathematics.

"Modern math" has presented a challenge to the traditional H.H.S. math teachers and to the student who may have become set in his ways. "Element," "set," and "number line" have become familiar terms to all math students as this new approach is being stressed more.

Individual Research and Study Bring Knowledge

UNUSUAL ODORS, colored fumes, and wet tables, as well as new knowledge, result from chemistry experiments like the one Linda Anderson, H.H.S. senior, is performing.

Science

"Why is grass green?" This question, asked by all young children, can be answered by any H.H.S. sophomore. Solutions to this and many more such questions are found through the study of biology, chemistry, and physics. These courses, offered by the science department, give students a substantial background for the general information necessary to keep up with today's scientific world.

With modern equipment, the science laboratories give curious experimenters an opportunity to learn by careful observation and individual effort under supervision. Learning that sugar is a compound, a bicycle is made of several simple machines, and a plant cell contains cellulose, the science student understands more about himself and his world.

THE SCIENCE STUDENT . . . he learns, he analyzes, he experiments . . . knowledge from his predecessors will enable him to make important discoveries in the future.

Social Studies Department

History . . . this word becomes more than just a word to most H.H.S. students who venture into the various courses offered by the history department. Many may define it as events causing great leaders to rise and fall, and those by which nations have been developed. Others see current happenings creating tomorrow's history. All these things add to the definition.

Through world history, United States history, geography and economics and sociology, H.H.S. students gain an understanding of social concepts and of the interdependence of people and nations. As American citizens, students at Hickory High play a significant role in the making of history. For this reason, stress is being placed on an understanding of today's world — communism and capitalism, peaceful co-existence and disarmament, the "cold war" and nuclear fallout. Important occurrences are watched from day to day in an effort to be better informed, well-prepared citizens.

Practical Arts

The building of minds well-educated to live in today's world, of bodies strong enough to stand under pressure, and of hands trained to perform the tedious tasks of industry or of housekeeping, is the task of the practical arts department. This department provides instruction in homemaking, woodworking, physical education, and mechanical drawing, as well as job training.

Through the Distributive Education and Industrial Cooperative Training programs, H.H.S. students can go to school for morning classes and then leave for their jobs in Hickory area retail stores or manufacturing concerns. One of the first in the state, this program has successfully placed and trained dozens of students since its initiation.

Commercial Department

Challenging, tedious, rigorous . . . the business world of today presents a diversified, intriguing field for young people to enter. Commercial students at Hickory High School are preparing for their future by taking the courses offered by this department. Whether taking dictation, typing a manuscript, balancing a ledger, or working with office machines, these students gain the skill — speed, accuracy, and neatness — necessary to make them competent office personnel after graduation.

Typing, shorthand, and bookkeeping are also important for those who intend to continue their formal education in college. These commercial courses are an invaluable aid in note-taking, preparing assignments, and balancing a personal or family budget after high school graduation.

Strains of music fill the air as the band practices for its next concert. Drifting into near-by classrooms, the notes accompany the math teacher's explanation of the factor theorem and the history student's reading of the preamble to the Constitution. As part of the fine arts department at H.H.S., the band, along with the string orchestra, chorus, and art classes, strives to further the appreciation of culture among high school students. Through these courses students not only learn techniques and technicalities, but also gain a general understanding of beauty and form.

To give students of music and art opportunity to display their talent and training, numerous contests are held throughout the year. The Hickory High School band and chorus give programs at Christmas and in the spring, while art pupils decorate for dances, banquets and exhibit at the Administration Building.

A picture in the newspaper, applause from schoolmates and teachers, congratulations from friends and relatives . . . these are a few of the forms of recognition given to students who have done exceptional work during their high school careers. Whether they have earned a local, state, or national honor, these pupils have put forth the extra effort which distinguishes them from their classmates.

The varied areas of achievement for which these students are noted display the versatility of the entire student body. Perseverance and creativity, coupled with natural ability, are the most important characteristics of an honor student. Leadership and friendly personalities are also important for these pupils who must, because of their achievements, set an example for others.

THE COMING OF SUMMER means different things to different people. It heralds trips to the beach, summer jobs, and lazy living. The warm weather also brings tall grass to the front lawn of Hickory High, as summer school progresses.

Summer School

After struggling through a winter of hard work, one is apt to close his books and forget them for the summer. There are always a few, however, who are willing to spend part of their vacation adding extra credits, making up failing work, or merely filling the desire for knowledge. Attending class five hours a day for six weeks, students work diligently to cram a full nine month's studying into the short term.

The summer school curriculum includes various credit courses such as Spanish, Algebra, Typing, and U. S. History, as well as several non-credit courses such as remedial reading. Driver's training, which is now required for drivers under eighteen years of age, is also taught at H.H.S. Actual on-the-road experience is given in summer school to conclude the classroom portion which is taught to many students in the winter after regular school hours.

Energetic Pupils

"I CAN'T BEAR TO TOUCH IT!" Biology students, Rita Spencer and Tina Baker, sophomores, are faced with the discouraging dilemma of dissecting a frog. A required subject, biology is often studied in summer school since it is difficult and time-consuming. Covering all phases of plant and animal life — from algae to man — biology gives a background for further study in science.

THE BREAK during a long summer school morning is a time for refreshment.

INDIVIDUAL HELP as well as group practice is afforded these summer band students, who meet three days a week, to improve the skills they need during the winter.

Sweat in Summer Heat to Earn Additional Units

CAUTION, SKILLFULNESS, AND CONFIDENCE are three traits which driver's training instructors attempt to instill in their pupils. Sheila Summers, H.H.S. junior, learns that driving is a responsibility as well as a privilege, as she sits, for the first time, behind the steering wheel of a car. Both driving experience and observation are given to summer school students at Hickory High.

HOLDING her breath, as the extra point is attempted, Jean Templeton shares the excitement and tension of the moment.

Cheerleaders

The key to a school's spirit is in the hands of its cheerleaders. Personality plus vitality makes the H.H.S. cheerleaders a special group of girls, capable of leading students to loyal team support.

Throughout the football season, students pack into the auditorium for weekly pep rallies. Along with leading the cheers, the girls arouse new enthusiasm through entertaining skits. By emulating the athletes, the cheerleaders promote good sportsmanship after defeats.

Aside from all the fun and glory, much hard work is involved in cheerleading. This past summer Nancy Carol Bost, Connie Howard, Rita Spencer, and Sherry Preslar attended a camp held at Virginia Beach, Virginia. There they learned many new cheers and ideas for skits. They also won the trophy for being the most outstanding group attending the camp. During the school year, bulletin boards are made by the cheerleaders to inform the student body of weekly games. Each day a cheerleader is responsible for raising the flag on the H.H.S. flagpole.

Win or Lose, Coaches Boost the Teams' Morale

TENSION is plainly visible on the faces of the cheerleaders, football players, and spectators as Kings Mountain attempts a field goal for the lead in the State Championship game.

Throughout the school year, the H.H.S. coaching staff is in action. Long hours are spent in vigorous training programs, conditioning team members both mentally and physically through individual help and instruction. Most important, the coaches emphasize teamwork and cooperation among the participants. Many athletic fans overlook the extraordinary patience and undying love for the sport that is required to produce a first class team. Thus, the coach is often the unsung hero of the game. The weekly pep rallies give the mentors an opportunity to supplement the cheerleaders' efforts to arouse enthusiasm for the Friday evening games. The coaches also serve as scouts to observe future contenders.

Weeks before the beginning of school, under the hot August sun, the football squads and their coaches are actively engaged in preparation for their forthcoming games. Near the end of the football season, the coaches must divide their time between gridiron and the basketball courts. All of the coaches return to active duty for spring sports, supervising the various teams

Tornadoes Come Back after Three Losses to

Varsity Football

Unfailing morale was the keynote of the varsity football team this season. Although the team met defeat in its first three conference contests, its spirit remained undaunted. The fourth game, however, against Marion, proved to be the turning point of the season. Their determination unleashed, the Tornadoes continued to win, more than a match for their most difficult opponents. Marion's defeat gave the team renewed hope. As the season progressed, and the team gained momentum with each victory, they seemed unstoppable. Winning their remaining games, they became champions of the Northwestern Conference. This brought them to the semi-final play-off, where, despite their predicted loss by two touchdowns, they defeated Kings Mountain. After a remarkable come-back, containing eight straight victories, the team then met Thomasville for the 3-A Championship of the state. Forced into substitutions due to first quarter injuries, Hickory's strategy was handicapped. Thomasville pulled ahead in the second half, and Hickory was defeated by one touchdown.

Perfect Season

J. V. Football

Finishing the 1964 season undefeated in conference play, the Junior Varsity captured the first championship of its newly organized conference. Coached by Mark Lyerly, the boys displayed great teamwork as they chalked up victory after victory.

After dropping the first game to Asheville, the team was aroused with the desire to win. This desire was fulfilled in the ensuing games, as the Junior Tornadoes continued to grind out victories. Especially gratifying to the players was the defeat of Asheville at their second meeting. During the season, the defense allowed only 53 points, while the offense scored 154 points. This wide margin indicates the great determination with which the team played.

The season was culminated with the final game against Morganton. Until that time, Morganton also was undefeated, and the conference title rested upon this game. However, all the time and hard work devoted by the boys was rewarded by the triumph over Morganton.

ALERT DEFENSIVE MOVES were required to match the elusive running tactics of this Lenoir back. A fast-moving defense backfield and an immovable forward wall contributed to many of Hickory's victories, and also took them into the championship games

STRATEGY for the upcoming action is outlined by Coach Mark Lyerly as exhausted Hickory cagers welcome a breather between quarters in the state championship game.

The H.H.S. varsity basketball team blazed through their '65 schedule in a maze of precision, confidence, and determination, which resulted in an undefeated season. The '65 Tornadoes combined their individual talents to produce one well co-ordinated unit, presenting themselves as a major threat to every team in the conference.

Whether the cagers were confronted with zone or man-to-man defense, they pulled from their vast reserves of height, speed, and accuracy a unique combination to successfully meet the challenge. Relying on the accurate shooting of Ronnie Randle and co-captain Gary Abernethy, Eddie Crump, the clowning playmaker, managed to penetrate the tightest of defenses with quick passes and well-timed drives. Pairing this offensive play with the control of the board by David Whitener and Albert Land, Hickory pounded away at the goal with first and second efforts to maintain supreme control of the court. Superior play enabled them to win the conference and state titles.

J. V. Basketball

Unbeaten in thirty-six consecutive contests, the H.H.S. Junior Varsity cagers again displayed the characteristics of teamwork, ability and exceptional coaching that mark a winning team. Their perfect season was of special significance this year, as it awarded them the first championship crown of the newly organized Junior Varsity conference. Coached by Jim Garrett, every member of the team contributed to the winning spirit which prevailed throughout the season.

The team, possessing strength in all areas, displayed skill in shooting, rebounding, free throws, and overall ball-handling. The high scorer was forward Mike Mallan with a 13.8 average, while Phil Wilson led in rebounds. Guard Danny White proved to be versatile, playing well on both offense and defense, and Ronnie Goodson starred in the last part of the season. Supported by a strong bench reserve, the cagers demonstrated both skill and sportsmanship.

The entire season showed that each player had a strong desire to compete. Due to liberal substitutions, not only the starters, but the whole team acquired valuable experience.

Girls' Basketball

Practiced shooting and guarding tactics sparked the Hickory Tornadoettes to a promising season. Sophomore, Gail Golden, and junior, Marsha Cordell, led the scoring for the sextet. Undaunted by early defeats, the girls emerged as an efficient, smooth-working unit composed entirely of juniors and sophomores. After defeating Taylorsville for the first time in eight years, the Tornadoettes wrapped up the season with a record of 10 wins and 7 losses. A final victory over Wilkes Central won the girls a place in the conference playoffs at Marion where they lost the first round of tournament play to the Lincolnton Wolf Pack.

Exchanging the game uniforms for lacy frills, the Tornadoettes attended an Awards Banquet with the Varsity and Junior Varsity teams at which the outstanding players of the season were honored.

Ten and One Season Brings Baseball Team into

Baseball

After completing the season with a 10-1 record, the 1964 baseball team earned the conference championship. Traveling to meet Shelby in the Bi-Conference play-off, at the end of the season, they were defeated.

Under the direction of Coach Mark Lyerly, the team clearly showed that nine players could operate together as one co-ordinated unit. Throughout the season the boys displayed the quality of full devotion to the team's welfare. At the conclusion of the season, five Hickory players were selected for the Northwestern All-Conference team. Second Baseman Dick Deal led the Tornadoes in batting with a .352 average. Closely following were outfielder Hal Boliek and catcher Eddie Crump with .342 and .324, respectively. Outfielder Steve Wilson starred on defense, while pitcher Steve Sisk maintained a 4-1 record and led the team with 52 strike-outs.

The team's success this year enabled its member to acquire valuable experience. With many of the starting players returning next year, the team will have its sights set on the state championship.

SWINGING UP and extending his body over the bar, vaulter Marty Phillips balances on the pole for an instant. In contrast with other events, vaulting demands overall body development and requires constant practice to maintain coordination.

DOUG RHYMES swings his arms in an effort to maintain balance while leaping over the sawdust in a first place jump.

CHILLY WEATHER during early spring practice requires heavy sweat pants and shirt for pre-meet warm-ups. Junior thinclad Glenn Tucker, despite the handicap of the extra bulk, leaps dextrously over the high jump bar during a preliminary event.

Capture Association Conference Championships Track

Sweat, fatigue, and victory—these are the things to which the H.H.S. track team quickly becomes accustomed. Before the trees displayed their new leaves, the track team launched its season with early spring practice.

Continual running and drilling in specialized events soon had the team in shape, and on March 19, the Hickory thinclads competed with six other teams in their first meet. An undefeated season followed this first meet and victory, as the Hickory team out ran, out jumped, and out threw other track teams from all over the western part of the state. Not only did the H.H.S. team come out in top position in six meets, but they also placed first in both the Bi-Conference and Association track meets.

Hickory displayed strength in the pole vault, high jump, and all the major running events. But these definite strengths alone were not responsible for the successful season. Excellent coaching, experience, and hard work produced a well-balanced team last season, which did not rely wholly on strength in a few major events. Not only was the team well-balanced, but also well-represented by all three classes, producing optimism for the upcoming season.

BREAKING INTO an early lead and maintaining it throughout his lap, Brad Stevens skillfully passes the baton to his successor, Ralph Hefner, with perfect timing in the mile relay event at the Bi-Conference meet held in Shelby.

Tennis

Depth—this was the characteristic dimension of the 1964 H.H.S. tennis squad, and to this dimension is accredited an undefeated season for the 1964 netters with twelve wins. The variation in playing ability between the number one and number six man was so small that no team was able to produce a total team defense and offense as strong or solid as that exhibited by the Hickory High netters. Even strong offensive rivals, boasting one or two exceptional players, were not able to completely topple the Hickory defense and win enough matches to defeat the Hickory squad.

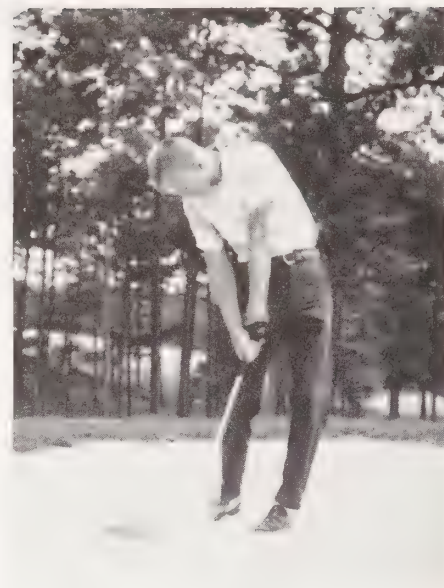

After two weeks of preliminary practice, the Hickory netters launched into their spring season, defeating Mt. Holly, Shelby, Newton, and Statesville by large margins. With confidence running at a high pitch, the team continued to travel to and from their home courts, meeting opponents for a second time. Both Statesville and Elkin threatened to break Hickory's long winning streak, but failed to do so, both giving H.H.S. a 5-4 win.

WITH BOTH RACKET and body poised, and his eyes on the fast moving ball, Junior Hickory High netter Larry Twisdale tensely awaits the oncoming volley from behind the seemingly oversized net during one of his triumphant matches.

Rainy Weather During Golf Season Proves

FOLLOWING their drives from the tee down the fairway, members of the H.H.S. Golf Team discuss strategy for the remainder of the match.

Golf Team

Inexperience resulted in a season full of troubles and defeats for the '64 golfers. Jack Williams, playing number one, led the team through their seven meets. Playing behind Williams were two seniors, two juniors, and two sophomores, all of whom lettered during the season.

Early in the spring the H. H. S. golfers traveled twice to Morganton to play in their first two meets of the season. Competing against four and seven teams respectively, the Hickory men could do no better than hold a third place position in the final scoring. Immediately following these first two meets, Hickory played host to seven teams of the surrounding area. Again the seven golfers failed in their victory attempt. Meeting with six teams at Lenoir, Hudson, and Wilkes Central, Hickory progressed to the Association Tournament at Shelby which ended their season.

Rain often discontinued or completely eliminated the golfers' practice sessions. Yet, this and a minority of experienced players failed to dampen the team's spirit. Admirable sportsmanship prevailed throughout the entire '64 season.

PLAYING THE BREAK requires careful planning and knowledge of the green. Tommy Arcuri's intense concentration is visible as he hopefully sinks his final putt.

Student Council

The last hour of each day finds the executive branch of the student government, the Student Council, busily tackling problems in school policy. The co-ordinated effort of the Council and the Principal determines the programs and projects to be carried out by the Homeroom Representatives. Some of the activities directed by the Council are selling football programs, co-ordinating assemblies, conducting elections, and supervising Homecoming ceremonies.

Besides these school functions, Council members attend state and national workshops during the summer. Positions of individual responsibility and concerted group efforts help each member gain self-sufficiency and a realization of the importance of teamwork in school government and activity preparation.

Homeroom Representatives

Forming the lower house of Student Council, Homeroom Representatives act as a liaison group between the Student Council and the student body. Elected by each homeroom, they attend a monthly meeting presided over by the vice-president of the Student Council. Sponsored for the first time this year by the Rotary Club, they are charged with the duty of bringing student suggestions and complaints to meetings and disseminating to the homerooms information on school policies.

One of the duties of the representatives is to assist in maintaining order in the lunchroom. The selection of Student of the Month is another task placed in their hands. The daily responsibilities of the representative are to conduct class business and to exemplify good school citizenship.

Interested in relating the school's faculty to the parents of the school's students, P.T.A. representatives are an active intermediary. At the opening of each new school year, representatives who are elected from the student body, collect membership fees for the Parent Teacher Association. They also are official guides during the P.T.A. open house and informationists at every monthly meeting.

Throughout the school year, telephone committees operate to keep interested parents reminded of pertinent dates, important speakers, and various projects. Regular club meetings serve as a check on all members to be sure that each is aware of upcoming events and is doing his part to remind parents of them.

Inter-Club Reviews, Evaluates Club Activities

IN KEEPING with Southern Association regulations, Inter-Club President Kip Baker and Secretary Kathryn Gwin scan rolls of H.H.S. clubs to spot-check grades.

Inter-Club

"What worthy project is your club sponsoring this year?" This question might be asked by an officer of the Inter-Club Advisory Council and is typical of those being faced by each club president. One of the main activities of the Inter-Club Advisory Council this year is to examine the organization, constitution, and actual activities of each club. Based on the philosophy that an organization should not exist when it is no longer of benefit to the school, this Council makes sure that the intentions of each club are carried out. Aiding the Southern Association in evaluating the school is another project Inter-Club has undertaken this year.

Consisting of the head of each organization, the club represents the working force behind the thirty-five different clubs of Hickory High School. Inter-Club works closely with the school principal to unite every club under the school specifications. Its purpose is to create a closer and more harmonious relationship among the various school organizations. The group also helps newly formed clubs draw up charters and plan extra-curricular functions.

Hall Monitors

The changing of the guards? A flock of misplaced students? Intentional tardies? Of course not! The newest school organization is in action. Hall Monitors, composed completely of members of the junior class, originated this year. Under the advisorship of the school principal, the three junior class officers selected members of the class capable of supervision over the student body. Stationed at strategic points throughout the school during class changes, these students insure quick class transfers with a minimum of noise and confusion. Each monitor is on hall patrol to guide school traffic and to prevent congestion in the stairwells. Also enforced by monitors is the rule—"no smoking on the fire escape or within the building." In essence, the aim of this new organization is to make Hickory High a safer school by enforcing routine safety rules. A monitor serves as supervisor and "traffic cop" for potential offenders.

Quill and Scroll

Financing its journalistic projects through social activities, Quill and Scroll is one of H.H.S.'s most active groups. This literary honor society, rated this year as number one among the 5,000 nationally associated chapters, is composed of members of the radio, newspaper, literary magazine, and annual staff, who qualify through service on publications. To further the principles of journalism, the club sponsors delegates who attend the annual S.I.P.A. Convention in Virginia. The group also invites students from about fifty other schools to spend a week-end in Hickory. Here they discuss the editing, photography, and business procedures of their different publications.

Other functions of this organization are evident in the many activities it sponsors: the Beauty Contest, Twirp Dance, and Discotheque Dance. These events provide funds for two scholarships presented at the annual banquet. Thus, Quill and Scroll not only promotes journalism but also sponsors many of the school's social activities.

Beta Club

"To promote scholarship, integrity, and leadership . . ." These few words from the club constitution describe the objectives of the Beta Club at Hickory High School.

The junior members of the Beta Club consider it a single honor to perform an annual service to the student body as Marshals at the Baccalaureate and Graduation ceremonies. Seating the audience precedes their most impressive duty—escorting the graduating seniors into the auditorium.

Affiliated with the National Organization, this club is an honor society, stressing interest in high scholastic achievement. As a result, an impressive percentage of Who's Who candidates, Merit Scholarship finalists, and outstanding student leaders are found within the ranks of the Beta Club.

Hickory Log Staff

In the wee hours of the morning before a deadline is due, the LOG staff is putting last touches on important write-ups. The routine work never ceases, for section pictures must be taken; copy, captions, and running heads must be written. Then re-writes, retakes, and statistics are compiled. The business facet also entails long hours after school soliciting money for advertisements.

Highlighting their final year of work, seniors of both staffs visit New York during the CSPA convention. In the spring two delegates are sent to the Southern Association Convention in Lexington, Virginia.

The editorial and business staffs combine efforts to provide Hickory High School with a lasting record of her students, teachers, and their activities. In the spring, in a hushed auditorium, all the aspirations of the two staffs are accomplished, and the LOG is proudly presented to the students and faculty.

LOG MEMBERS wave good-bye, thinking of the adventurous trip ahead.

Twig

Half-eaten sandwiches, cold coffee, and speeding presses smelling of fresh ink are not part of the scene, but much of the other paraphernalia of a newspaper office surround the TWIG staff of Hickory High. To meet the financial needs of the paper, the business staff solicits ads from Hickory's stores, firms and business offices. Each Tuesday evening prior to a Friday morning deadline, the business editors prepare layouts for the ad section.

The editorial staff completes and polishes each editorial, column, and feature article. Working during fifth period, typewriters clatter, conversation drones, and the forthcoming newspaper takes shape.

The bi-weekly appearance and wide coverage of the TWIG makes it an important part of the school program. It announces coming activities, reports the various sports events, features outstanding students, announces elected positions, and publishes student opinions. Special editions at Christmas and the end of the year reinforce the efforts made by the TWIG staff to publish an outstanding paper.

Leaves

Acting as amateur talent scouts, the LEAVES staff examines the English papers of H.H.S. students and selects their most outstanding work for publication. The result is a highly rated literary magazine containing poems, short stories, articles, and unique art works.

The staff is actually three in one. The editorial, business, and art segments are combined on the LEAVES. The responsibilities of the editorial sector include collecting entries submitted by English teachers or individuals themselves, screening them until only the most original and outstanding remain, and arranging them for publication. Artistic students illustrate various selections and also design the cover motif. The problems of finance are solved by the business staff which solicits ads and sells Student Directories and LOG covers. All of these efforts are combined to produce a unique collection of student talent in the literary field and creativity in art work.

EACH LEAVES STAFF MEMBER fulfills his individual responsibilities for the magazine, a fact evident in the variety of activities conducted during one class period.

Radio Staff Serves School by Making Daily

Radio

Each Saturday morning, under the auspices of a local radio station, the Hickory High School Radio Staff broadcasts a program of interest to the community, and especially to school students. "Hickory High Speaks" relays the latest on sports events, club projects, general announcements, and special features to its listeners. While providing this service, staff members acquire experience in the communications field. One day each year, Radio Day, the members are permitted to run the station. They are completely on their own to supervise every facet of broadcasting, from writing commercials or selecting records, to announcing news bulletins. During the summer, several representatives from the Radio staff attend a session held at the Radio-TV Institute at Chapel Hill, North Carolina.

Spanish

Imagine stepping off a bus in a strange town and being greeted by "Bienvendio Americano." This could happen to any representative from "El Circulo de Espanol," the Spanish Club at Hickory High School. Several outstanding Spanish students visited Mexico last summer to gain first hand information supplementing the history and customs they had previously learned through club projects.

Two activities are the writing of letters in Spanish to Latin American High Schools, and inviting special guest speakers to the monthly club meetings. These activities further the practical knowledge each member has of Spanish speaking people.

Various fund raising endeavors enable the club to provide a scholarship to a senior student who excels in the Spanish language and wishes to continue in this field. As the year concludes, club officers prepare for the annual banquet which is completely Spanish, from tortillas to tamales, shawls to castanets.

One of the Projects of the group is to sponsor A.F.S. weekend. Foreign exchange students from surrounding towns are house-guests of club members, giving the hosts an opportunity to know personally teenagers from many countries, and the visitors a broader experience in America. Following an open house, banquet, and informal gathering, the exchange students and Hickory High's A.F.S.'ers present a spirited panel discussion on topics ranging from world affairs to dating. Funds for these projects are raised through an annual potato chip sale and membership dues in the local French Club, a growing organization at H.H.S.

Latin Club

A complete revision of the Sigma Kappa Chapter of the Junior Classical League has taken place this year. The results include increased membership, new officers, and a new constitution which have injected greater significance into the Latin Club's activities and purposes. Self-supported and under the direction of a new adviser, the club has retained its original objective of delving deeper into the ancient language and the culture associated with it.

To meet this aim, the group launched the new year with the sale of new members as slaves. Christmas caroling and advance preparation for the annual state convention at Chapel Hill followed. While at Chapel Hill in past years, Hickory High School Latin Club members have captured top honors for competition in the fields of Roman History, word derivation, and mythology. A second "slave sale" and the annual banquet will complete the year's activities in a furor of tunics, togas, and sandals.

Chess Club

Despite a great emphasis on the new, the different, and the revolutionary, the medieval game of kings remains a favorite pastime for all ages. At Hickory High, chess is enjoyed by an enthusiastic group of students who meet to play once a month.

Chess Day, sponsored by the group, is the highlight of the year. Hickory High School plays host to members of the chess clubs from surrounding schools for a day of tournament play.

The pace quickens with the playing of many matches until the best strategist finally emerges from a maze of deliberation and carefully executed moves. By competing in this classical game, members develop greater proficiency in logical reasoning and a better understanding of the fundamentals of chess.

Library Club

Work beginning behind a librarian's desk extends throughout various aspects of a high school curriculum. The Library Club of Hickory High supplies many valuable services to the student body and faculty. The usual duties, such as checking books in and out and shelving books, are multiplied by the numerous periodicals and reference books to which the library subscribes. Supplying teachers with special reading materials and audio-visual equipment to parallel their various phases of teaching is another valuable service rendered. The responsibility of maintaining an informative as well as interesting display window on such subjects as careers, noted authors, and literary classic also lies with the Library Club. The members record these activities and projects in their scrapbook which is judged annually at the North Carolina High School Library Association Convention in Raleigh.

Thus, the library, serving as one of the centers of the school's activities, reaches out into all phases of teaching, guidance, and research. And as its members aid in its program, they gain valuable experience and other benefits in preparation for future vocations.

Debating Club

"Furthermore, our opponents have failed to prove . . ." These words resound emphatically from debators whether in practice or an actual debate. The Forensic Society of Hickory High has taken many steps toward developing effective debators. Regular monthly meetings plus extra sessions keep the members aware of the club's activities.

In affiliation with the North Carolina High School Debating Union, several local students attended a fall workshop and conference at Chapel Hill. The techniques and information gleaned are put into practice in class rehearsals, imaginary debates, and finally in the spring Round Robin. Playing host to debators from nearby high schools, the Forensic Society sponsors an all day session, judged and timed by prominent Hickory citizens. The topic chosen for the '65 debate is "Disarmament." Through participation in these events, Debating Club members develop skills in organizing information through extensive research, for the presentation and organization of various topics to be debated.

Engineers' Club

T-squares, slide rules, drawing boards, and stress tables may be of little use to the average teenager, but to the members of the Engineers' Club, they are valuable instruments, frequently used. Although it is one of the newest clubs at Hickory High School, the organization has proved successful with an increase in membership. At monthly meetings, speakers introduce members to the most recent techniques and theories developed for use in engineering today.

During the year, members tour local industrial plants and manufacturing corporations to see the various procedures applied and to view their fields of interest in action. Visits to construction camps and building sites provide members with the opportunity to observe the actual use of engineering methods and tools. The club's purpose is to encourage teenagers to consider engineering as a profession, and further, to inform them of opportunities in this burgeoning profession.

Chemistry Club

From the concoction of potions by bearded alchemists, chemistry has progressed to the perfection of complex reactors now supplying atomic energy to our nation. H.H.S.'s Chemistry Club gives teenagers with a special interest in chemistry and other related fields of science the opportunity to pursue this interest. A small organization, its purpose is to provide opportunities beyond classroom study, by which members can apply knowledge to scientific problems and methods.

Members travel annually to Tennessee to visit the Oakridge Institute of Nuclear Studies. Speakers and a trip to a local chemical plant further broaden the scope of the club program. Through this organization, scientifically-minded students have the opportunity to delve deeper into the advanced world of science.

Hickory High Receives Touches of Beautification

"LINDA, YOU'RE spilling so much paint you'll never have enough to cover the trash cans," warns Ramah Blackwelder, center, as Jeanne Schell, right, looks on apprehensively and Betty Hardin concentrates on stirring her own bucket of paint.

Garden Club

One of the few school clubs with an entirely feminine membership, the Garden Club, has become extremely active this year. A realization that beauty cannot exist without cleanliness led the club to sponsor a litterbug campaign on the campus of Hickory High School. One project of this campaign was to paint trash disposal containers for the school. These containers now serve as reminders for the students to keep the grounds neat and attractive.

At monthly meetings club members discuss ideas concerning landscaping and flower arranging. The knowledge gained at these meetings is applied through the club's projects. One project is the planting of azaleas at various spots on the campus. The results of club efforts are more attractive and cleanly kept school grounds all year round.

Art Club

The Sketch Club of Hickory High School, working with art's varied forms, shows its face in many places throughout the school and the community. Most familiar to the average student are the colorful decorations which dangle or glitter from the walls around the dance floor at the Junior-Senior prom or the Homecoming dance. Bulletin boards in the school halls give the club an opportunity to display variations of art on a central theme. Hanging student displays in the School Administration Building is another project of the group.

Perhaps most important to the members themselves is the annual opportunity to submit entries of their work to the Hickory Museum of Art and the Community Art Contest for Students. Another yearly event is a trip to Raleigh, N. C. for an educational tour through the State Museum of Art.

Students Gain Practical Experience in Preparation

The kindergarten question, "What are you going to be when you grow up?" has matured into a High School Guidance Department and "What are your plans after graduation?" To the rather large membership of Future Teachers of America, teaching is synonymous with the future.

Affiliated with the National Education Association, the F.T.A. of Hickory High revolves around three important purposes. The most evident is to encourage young people to enter teaching as a lifetime profession. By doing this, the second purpose—to acquaint interested students with the duties of a teacher—is fulfilled. The third purpose also serves as the main club project for the year. Each F.T.A. member has a teacher assignment and lends her services to that teacher during study halls in order to lighten the necessary load of paperwork. Duties range from grading tests and recording grades to running errands or supervising a class during the teacher's absence.

An annual Educator's Convention is a highlight of the year. Each spring an individual is selected as most valuable to the club. This person is recognized and presented an award during graduation exercises.

Future Homemakers of America

Stitch one, take out four — knit two, not purl three — stir in one cup salt mistaken for sugar — any homemaker can have these problems, but hopefully not those from H.H.S. As its name suggests, Future Homemakers of America is an organization which begins the preparation needed by young women to become efficient wives and mothers. To make better homemakers and to help each girl better understand her home, neighbors, and friends, is one goal.

Nurses

The quiet tread of canvas shoes — hushed voices — dim lights — this description of a hospital, unknown to many who limit their scope to TV images, is like second nature to members of H.H.S.'s Nurses Club. This relatively new organization is composed of girls desiring to go into nursing or some related field. At the group's meetings, girls learn the basics of nursing: extent of training, numerous duties, and personal rewards. One project of the club which is beneficial to the community is scheduling members to help serve meals at the local home for the aged. From this activity, girls gain experience in meeting responsibilities. Speakers and printed pamphlets supplement the information presented at club meetings. Through this organization girls begin early to develop the efficiency expected of a responsible and capable nurse.

Group Projects and Activities

Future Business Leaders of America

The Future Business Leaders of America has brought recognition to H.H.S. on both state and national levels. In North Carolina, it won second place for the most original club project — the Secretarial Aid Program. First place was awarded the H.H.S. scrapbook. It will be the state's entry at the convention in Washington, D. C. The Gold Seal Award, given to a selected few of the three thousand chapters of F.B.L.A., was won by the H.H.S. chapter.

The Secretarial Aid Program has been expanded this year to include dictation and mimeographing for teachers. Programs are designed and printed for school events, including the Beauty Pageant, plays, and special programs. Offering their services to the community, members helped in the KO Polio drive.

Bus Drivers

Find an upperclassman with the desire to be of service to both his school and his community; test him for patience and reliability; train him to be a careful driver, and he is prepared for a unique group. Such carefully screened junior and senior students become fully qualified bus drivers, and begin their daily routine by transporting elementary and high school students to and from school.

Besides driving their appointed runs within a certain time limit, the bus drivers are responsible for the over-all maintenance of their individual busses. These duties range from putting chains on tires in the snow, to sweeping out littered aisles. Every aspect of their service, from the number of passengers they carry to their speed limits, must meet state safety requirements. Monthly reports submitted by each driver, regular meetings held with their supervisor, and practice runs required of each new or assistant bus driver, combine to provide reliable, conscientious, and most important, safe transportation for students of the Hickory City School System.

Auto and Safety Club

Conscious of the need for more careful observance of traffic laws and procedures, Hickory High School's Central Auto and Safety Club was organized to promote safe driving among students. Now in its second year, the club officers have outlined new activities to utilize the increased membership. In early autumn, with the cooperation of the city police force, the club directed a safety check on cars of Hickory High students. Through this activity, members hoped to impress upon student drivers the importance of routine car care. One of the newest school organizations in the H.H.S. curriculum, the Central Auto and Safety Club is now functioning as a constituted club approved by the student government and Southern Association. Since it is one of the few school safety organizations in North Carolina, the club is hoping to promote interest in this field throughout other schools in the area.

SANTA'S SEASON comes to Hickory High School through a cheerful holiday scene arranged by Distributive Education members in the club display window.

Distributive Education

Practicing the principle that experience is the best teacher, Distributive Education is a program which enables students to hold a regular job and still obtain the education essential in the contemporary business world. Although many students are unfamiliar with the purpose and extent of such an organization, it is vital to the club members as well as beneficial to the community.

Local business leaders speak on the responsibilities and rewards of their particular field at the monthly meetings. District, state, and national conventions challenge D. E. members to attain club goals and individual honors in competition with their peers. Capturing top honors in the job interview competition, local D. E. members won praise for Hickory High during the '64 convention. Perhaps most appreciated by the student is his employer. The annual Bosses Banquet is a genuine thank-you to each employer for his vote of confidence and helpful advice.

Vocational Industrial Club

"All honorable professions filled with honorable employees," Confucius would say. The twenty-four members of Hickory High's Vocational Industrial Club are no exceptions. A club which has rapidly grown in membership, V.I.C. functions on a routine of time clocks, employers, pay checks and school work. Working with establishments in the Hickory area, students not planning to attend college are offered a variety of job placements which will enable them to obtain practical experience in the business world.

Though relatively new to the circuit of conventions and associations, V.I.C. members attend the workshop held in Gastonia and the state convention in Morehead City. The Bosses' Banquet highlights the year and provides members with an opportunity to express gratitude to their employers.

An organization to which no member of the male sex may belong is the Sub-Junior Woman's Club of Hickory High School. On its way to becoming one of the largest school organizations, Sub-Juniors has as its purpose "to provide experience and training for civic leadership." Each year the club works toward this goal through holiday visitations to retarded children at the Western-Carolina Center in Morganton, North Carolina.

Members plan, as well as host, the clash of juniors and seniors in an annual football game known as the Powder Bowl. During the chill of winter, Sub-Junior members model summer clothes and swim suits in their fashion show. A candy sale is another activity which brings in funds to the club. Affiliated with the Hickory Junior Women's Club, Sub-Junior members contribute to their school and community by giving two one hundred dollar college scholarships to deserving Negro girls. Members also participate in the local Heart Fund Drive as part of their year's activities in the community.

Key Club

With a male majority and masculine rule — Key Club, the Kiwanis sponsored organization at Hickory High School, is programmed to aid the school and community through various civic activities. By collecting and repairing used toys to be distributed to needy children during the Christmas season, a portion of the club's civic projects is accomplished. The selling of candy helps to finance a dance with the Sub-Junior Woman's Club. Also included in the club's schedule is a light bulb sale carried out in the Hickory area.

As the highlight of the year, members are given the opportunity to attend the National Key Club Convention. Held in the spring, this meeting gives representatives from throughout the country a chance to meet and discuss future projects and common objectives.

A ONCE in a lifetime experience materializes for Gail Beach as she is officially pinned as H.H.S.'s '64-'65 DeMolay Sweetheart by Head Master Pete Edens.

H.H.S. Students

DeMolay

Supplementing the school and church in the development of youth, the local Jones W. Shuford Chapter of the Order of DeMolay is one of the numerous groups established in seventeen different countries. Weekly meetings and social activities, including a Christmas dance, a Sweethearts' Ball, and a June dance, constitute the yearly schedule.

As an added project this year, the chapter is planning to sponsor a DeMolay Circus. By aiding the community in the Empty Stocking Fund drive in December, the chapter accomplishes its dual purpose of encouraging clean living and of preparing boys for the responsibilities they will assume.

Climaxing the activities of their year, the chapter takes over the reins of the city for one day. They fill such prominent positions as mayor, city manager, police chief, fire chief, and city chemist, and carry out the duties of each office.

Monogram Club

Paradoxically, in an era when physical fitness is stressed, few girls seem to have the desire to participate in sports. Monogram clubs were originally begun to combat the lack of interest in women's athletics. Membership in the Hickory High School Monogram Club increases yearly and retains its original goal, to stimulate a greater interest in girls' athletics. To become a member, a girl must letter in one of three sports, cheerleading, basketball, or tennis.

Monogram Club members sponsor car washes as a means of raising money for their letter sweaters and to sponsor one or more members who attend the annual girls' athletic meet. Deciding upon the design and color of monograms and the blazers is another decision made by club members. Working hard all year is rewarded with the presentation of this mark of athletic ability.

TOTALING FUNDS after pennant sale to H.H.S. student body, Monogram Club members Dinny Harper and Rebecca Lyons check balance against sale record.

PLEASED with first sale's success, Sue Speagle prepares to reorder pennants.

Chorus

Full appreciation of any chorus requires more than a love of music. It takes a realization of all the hard work such an organization involves. An interesting look behind the scenes of the Hickory High Chorus would uncover not only hours of practice during the regular school period when each piece is studied as well as sung, but also night rehearsals held in order to polish and perfect every selection for an upcoming performance.

The pleasure expressed by a chorus member in his singing is shared with the community at various times throughout the year. During the Christmas season, there are school assembly programs and special concerts. The Hickory High School Chorus presents a variety of types of music as well as hours of listening pleasure to any audience. It performs for the local college Baccalaureate service, high school graduation, P.T.A. meetings throughout the city school system, and various civic clubs. Some of the advanced members of the chorus are given the opportunity to attend the Choral Workshop in Chapel Hill, or the All-State Chorus in Greensboro for the North Carolina Music Educators Conference.

Precision Formations and Musical Selections

H.H.S. Band

A member of the First Chair of America, the Hickory High Band is well known to both the school and the community. At sports events, pep rallies, holiday programs, graduation exercises — the marching or concert band appears and presents music to suit the mood of each occasion. In preparation for every performance, the sophomore and junior-senior band members rehearse, not only during their allotted school period, but also long hours after school.

State and local contests challenge the band in unity of sound and variety of ability. The practices, contests, and concerts combine to produce a unique quality bringing honors and recognition to the school.

The night has arrived, the lights are low, and Seniors are now the guests rather than the hosts at Junior-Senior Prom. Each Senior experiences the pride of being a leader instead of a follower.

This is the year of anticipation, honor and glory. Each knows the fear of College Boards, the anxiety over college acceptance and the apprehension before semesters. He shares with underclassmen the hours of last-minute cramming, the fellowship of extracurricular activities, exuberance as the band plays "Dixie" and the excitement of ball games and pep rallies.

Every Senior faces numerous demands which lead to his becoming a mature adult capable of facing a fast-moving world. Each experiences sadness as he realizes that the last football game and the last pep rally of his high school years are over.

Climaxing twelve years of hard work, the Senior reaches graduation aware of the fact that he approaches an end as well as beginning. He has made his mark in high school and he now must make his mark elsewhere. His self-confidence camouflages his fear and insecurity, sets out to prove himself in the more adult world of which he will become a part.

"MAYBE we can let the hem out," sighs Tim Parlier, Senior Class Vice President, as he consents to being measured for his cap and gown by Class President Davenport Robertson and Secretary Susan Glenn, appalled by his six feet plus.

Graduation Conclude Successful Year in 1965

ACTIVITY PERIOD GIVES students a chance to daydream, study or just talk to friends.

Junior Class

Assuming the responsibility for the graduation dance marks a promotion for the Juniors. Feted by the underclassmen, Seniors enjoy the annual Junior-Senior Prom. Months of Junior planning, weeks of working out details, and hours of decorating and arranging, exemplify the traditional pride the Juniors take in making it the best prom ever for the departing class.

They assume the mantle of responsibility which they will wear as Seniors. They have taught the Sophomores and served the Seniors, gradually learning in clubs and class activities to step more maturely each year.

Juniors are the backbone class. They have passed their apprenticeship and are the journeymen. They still shudder at P.S.A.T., but they have learned to take tests without panic. They still gripe about homework and upper-class orders, but they carry on the work. In sports, publications, Student Council, and club activities, the Juniors serve and prepare to take their places in the top class. Meanwhile the Juniors type, sell ads, run laps around the field, serve as committee chairmen, study, and find the joy of learning by doing.

After summer leisure and idle months, Sophomores move tentatively into their new surroundings and more advanced studies. They take their place at the bottom to begin the long, difficult climb to the top. The maze of buildings never ceases to confuse Sophomores. When the classrooms are finally found, students silently walk in. As the roll is called they inch their hands up to meet the teacher's eyes or perhaps the braver ones manage a distorted "here."

The thought of the first H.H.S. ballgame sends a tingle of anticipation through them. Whether to eat, study, or gossip during the lunch period is their choice, one of the increasing number they will make. They feel proud to have the privilege of attending assemblies, an honor bestowed on them only a few times in past years. They tackle required courses and elect others which fit into vocational and educational plans. New rules, regulations, and directions are endured and responsibility is placed upon their shoulders.

As the year draws to a close, Sophomores have developed self-confidence, pride, and maturity. They are no longer standing on the lowest rung of the ladder for they now proceed to become the "middlemen."

SOPHOMORE CLASS OFFICERS' duties are few, but Walda Parker, Vice-Pres.; Dennis Benfield, Pres.; and Frances Gregg, Sec.; stay busy exemplifying the student, rather than the pupil, for their fellow classmen who look to them for guidance.

Foreign Customs, Strange Foods,

FIT FOR A HIGHLAND FLING, Glenn Datnoff dons a kilt and blends in with the Scottish atmosphere.

Amid snooker games, teenage "Mods" and "Rockers," and left-handed cars, Glenn Datnoff found his stay in England both amusing and confusing. As in most of Great Britain, tradition was the key word throughout the quaint fishing village where he lived. At Sea Houses in Northumberland County, Glenn slowly learned by trial and error the numerous customs and social graces befitting a proper "gent."

The homeward voyage on the Seven Seas provided the exchange students with a chance to compare countries and experiences. Glenn was acclaimed a natural-born Englishman by fellow A.F.S.'ers when he made his appearance peeking from beneath an unkept mop of Buster-Brown hair, and spouting the current pop-expressions with every breath. To outwardly become re-Americanized, Glenn regretfully had his locks shorn, and began speaking in a more comprehensible tongue.

THE ENGLISH influence of T. S. Eliot is apparent as Glenn Datnoff and Joe Hardy entertain with "The Love Song of J. Alfred Purfrock," at the smash hit Discotheque.

SURROUNDED BY RELICS of old English heritage, Glenn Datnoff personifies the modern American way of life in his adopted land.

Current Slang Amuse And Amaze A.F.S.'ers

JOINING IN ONE OF H.H.S.'s awaited rituals, the receiving of TWIGs, Sussi Hansen discusses the latest news.

SUSSI HANSEN, led by Hal Queen and crownbearer Kathy Poovey, begins her reign as Homecoming Maid of Honor.

THE END OF FOOTBALL SEASON and a crushing defeat bring tears to the eyes of cheerleaders Dinny Harper and her Danish A.F.S. sister, Sussi Hansen.

Undergoing the metamorphosis from a Danish youngster to an American teenager could be a difficult transition, but exchange student Ingekeis Hansen, better known to Hickory High as "Sussi," masters it with an outward smile and an inborn grace. Fluent in seven languages, her command of the English vocabulary astounds and intrigues adopted peers who were anticipating sign language to be the chief means of communication. A Nordic beauty who first captivated the campus with her lovely blonde hair and blue eyes, she has since endeared herself to faculty, students and audiences with her tact, charm, and special quality of sensitivity.

Yet, this beauty does not come without brains. An honor roll student, Sussi strives to learn more about the United States by taking American literature and U. S. history. Personifying her statement that Danes are more like Americans than any other Europeans, Sussi has readily adapted to her role as cheerleader and enthusiastically embraced American sports and teen activities.

Tanned Students Migrate as Beach Season Ends

A sophomore searching for a seemingly non-existent classroom, a junior manipulating his schedule to make that extra credit possible, a senior thumbing through catalogues to find out what courses are required for college; these make up the chaos of the first day of school. But, as the short weeks pass, things return to normal. Memories of lazy days at the beach are put out of mind, and students tackle assignments with renewed vigor.

LEAVING THE CLASSROOM far behind, a student recalls idle vacation days.

AS A LAZY SUMMER comes to an end, it's up bright and early to beat that 8:20 bell.

AS FALL LEAVES surround them, friends renew an acquaintance after a long separation.

NOT ONLY DOES FALL bring new faces and friends to H.H.S., but also new fads.

WITH THE DISTINCTION of being a senior comes the privilege of leaving campus.

LINGERING under a multi-hued tree, a student pauses before going to class.

PROVIDING PRE-GAME entertainment for their Homecoming hosts, Lenoir's high school band danced in march-time and thrilled spectators with their precision movements and timing. Sponsors and escorts watched attentively, awaiting their debut at half-time.

Football Win Adds to Homecoming Festivities

FORGETTING that she is royalty, Nancy Carol salutes the Tornadoes with a full-bodied cheer, typical of a Hickory High cheerleader.

Elation overtook both students and alumni as the Hickory High football team rolled over Lenoir at the Homecoming game. "Dixie" reverberated from the packed stands as the results of touchdown after touchdown were flashed on the scoreboard at quick-spaced intervals.

At half-time as delegates from each club, publication, and senior football player, Homecoming sponsors, with their chosen escorts, paraded by the stands and were presented to the student body. After the introduction of Sussi Hansen as maid of honor, the long awaited moment arrived. Nancy Carol Bost mounted a satin-draped riser and was crowned 1964 Homecoming Queen. With a kiss from Kip Baker, Student Council President, as a sign of affection from the entire student body, Nancy Carol's reign was officially begun.

The following weekend, Nancy Carol performed her first royal duty by presiding over the Homecoming Dance. And as the last bit of crepe paper was pulled down to find a new home in a scrapbook, Homecoming week came to a close.

WALL-TO-WALL students carpeted the crowded gymnasium floor at the Homecoming Dance as sponsors and escorts assembled for their presentation. As the night progressed, the Dynamics entertained dancing enthusiasts and bystanders alike by providing popular music and floor shows.

WITH SMILES, careful steps, and an armful of roses, Nancy Carol Bost, swept onto the field by her escort, Kip Baker, begins her reign as Miss Hickory High.

A WISH COMES TRUE for Kathy Poo-vey as she dances with football captain Larry Miller.

AS THE FINAL seconds of the Hickory-Newton game tick away, the chant, "We're number one!" begins to echo.

YOUNG MADEMOISELLES of the Quill and Scroll Society keep things really kicking at the Discotheque dance as they entertain onlookers with their version of the can-can.

Fall is a favorite season, for it gives students a chance to cut short that third period class on Friday. Flooding the auditorium, they let out their enthusiasm for the forthcoming game amidst the yells of the cheerleaders and the stirring songs of the band. At night the action shifts to the football field as the Tornado effort is focused on the conference championship. And as victory after victory is captured, students cheer the Tornadoes on as they seek the state title.

In addition to football, a favorite among fall festivities is the maze of harvest-time dances. Many times the Hickory Community Center plays host to top-name combos as well as to the after-game open houses. The H.H.S. gym is also often converted into a dancer's paradise as barbells are camouflaged to swell club pocket-books and the feet of H.H.S. dancers.

VICTORIOUS STRAINS of "Dixie" fill the auditorium as the band boosts the ego of the students. Blaring brass, thrilling woodwinds, and cadencing drums harmonize for school spirit that leads to energetic students, fighting teams and victories.

Fall Season is Spiced by Football and Dances

ANN HALL and Nancy Yoder literally "jump for joy" as the Hickory Tornadoes take the lead in touchdowns after a discouraging start.

Enthusiastic Students Pep Up Old Man Winter

TELL-TALE footprints in an icing of snow reveal the solitude of a deserted campus.

Winter is happiness . . . naked trees . . . blue skies sprinkled with smoke . . . warm fires . . . frozen ponds . . . rosy-cheeked children. Winter is the excitement at the Powder Bowl game, when Sub-Juniors don shoulder pads and borrow the pigskin. Winter is warm Christmas spirit and caroling in a foreign tongue. Winter is the New Year's resolution to pass semesters. Drudgery is semester exams. Winter is knee-deep snow and hot chocolate, hills which invite sledding, snowball fights and time-out from classes. Winter is the competition of keeping the basketball away from the other fellow; victory is keeping it longer. Winter is happiness which snowballs into fond memories.

SHEILA SUMMERS and Ronnie Berndt peruse yearbooks at Journalism Weekend.

VENTURING out on a cold December evening becomes a vocal and linguistic challenge. Yule singing French Club members render carols in the foreign tongue in hospitals and nearby neighborhoods. Afterwards they scurry to refreshments and warmth.

BEDECKED with colorful streamers, two H.H.S. students dance into the New Year.

STRUGGLING for yardage, backfielder Jean Templeton neatly clears the left end, as lineman Cindy Peeler frantically exerts feminine defense to protect Jean's move.

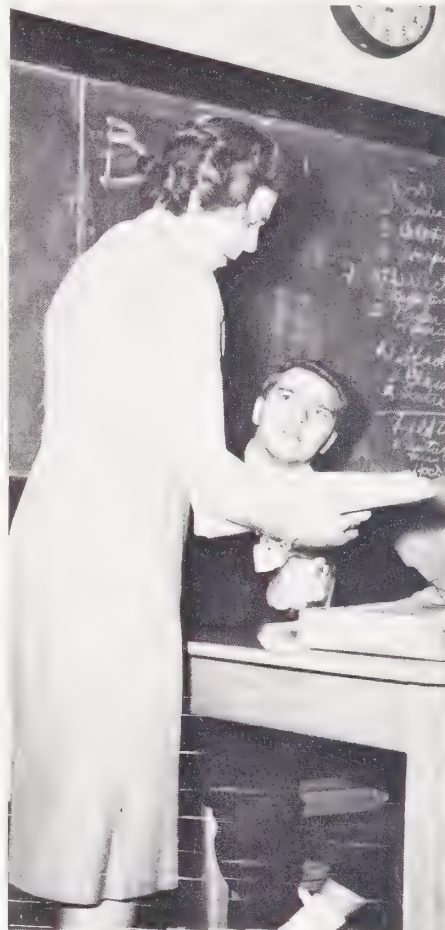

DURING semester tests, students cram facts not food in the lunchroom as noon feeding gives way to study diets.

SHERRY PREŠLAR finds the floor an ideal spot to compose an exam bulletin board.

UNCERTAINTY overtakes Max Bolick.

Exams

What are semesters? They are a teacher's expression of gratitude for months of work well done. They are long-awaited gifts that warm the heart at Christmas and thrill the soul at graduation. They are food for thought that keep the cobwebs of complacency brushed from the corners of the mind as midnight oil is bi-annually burned in the homes of H.H.S.'ers. Semesters are a way of life; a traditional part of high school years.

The pleasures of studying for semester exams is topped only by the challenge of taking them. As the moment of truth nears, textbooks are stacked outside of classrooms, pencils are sharpened, and students prepare for two and one-half hours of mental callisthenics. Completely enthralled with the adventure of higher learning, many students elect to forfeit lunch hour privileges to pursue their favorite pastime of test taking. And, when exams are over, students sadly resign themselves to the hum-drum of testless days.

ELATION understates the post semester explosion of Pat Turnbull and Gary Minton.

STACKS of books are "cracked" to fill the brain's vast wastelands as semester exams near.

School's Amateurs Turn Pro on Stage and

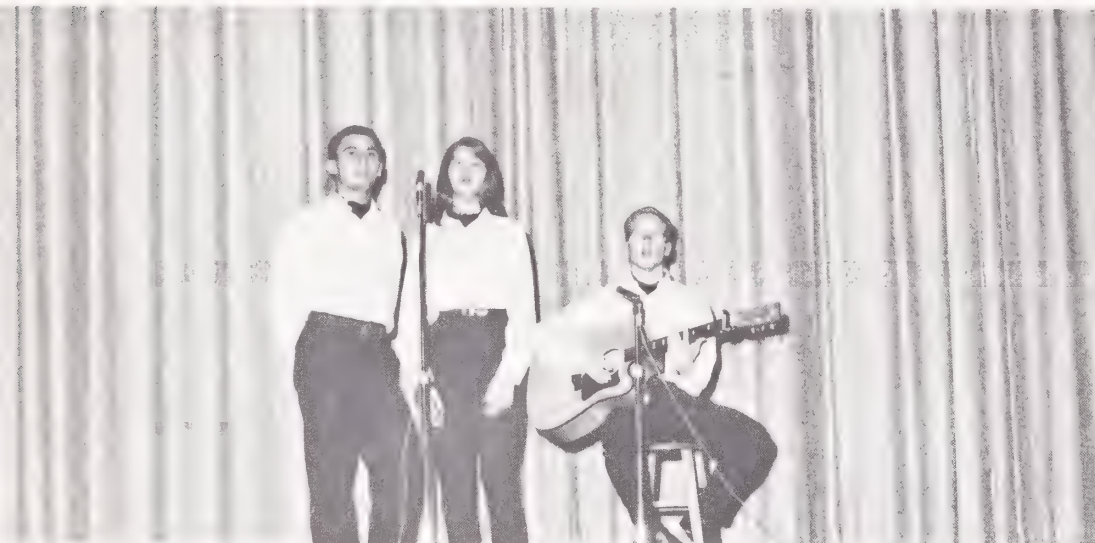

WITH SWAN-LIKE movements, Lee Harper concludes a winning performance.

BLASTING out on the stage with strains of contemporary jazz, the Tabs combo captivated the audience, impressed the judges, and walked off with the Talent Show prize.

THE AMERICANAS provide "pro" entertainment between acts at the Talent Show.

Although the school auditorium may not be Radio City Music Hall, the enthusiasm and effort poured into each Talent Show performance is just as great. Sponsoring the contest, the Student Council auditions performers, procures judges, and smoothly correlates the acts into a successful program geared to recognize undiscovered talent.

Talent in the 1964 contest ran the gamut from traditional Swedish Folk dancing and ballet to modern "rock-and-roll" rhythms and comical monologues. In addition to providing entertainment for the enjoyment of onlookers, the Talent Show often opens the door to future contracts and appearances.

Captivate Audiences at Talent Show, Class Play

ROBERT SHERRILL brandishes a doily-decked wastepaper basket as grim proof of his mother's merits in interior decorating.

The female has been the downfall of man "Ever Since Eve"! And, the age-old proverb is proved again.

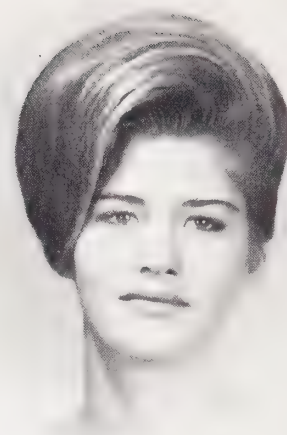

Trapped by a bevy of the opposite sex, Johnny Clover and Spud Erwin, played by Robert Sherrill and Leon Smith, respectively, find themselves up against unequal odds. Johnny, as the editor of the school newspaper, is faced with near disaster when Spud informs him that Susan Blake, portrayed by Judy Kever, has been sent by the faculty to help him out. Unfortunately for the boys, the female fatality does not end with Susan, but both fall for a high-school "Delilah," Lucybelle, played by Donna McCampbell. With all these problems, Johnny and Spud become the target for laughter.

"AH, LUCYBELLE, don't be bashful." Donna McCampbell as the caricature of a Southern Belle hides her face during a hilarious scene in the Senior Play.

"WHY CAN'T YOU remember that line?" demands Alfred Moretz. Many after school practices and hours of hard work combine to produce a successful Senior Play.

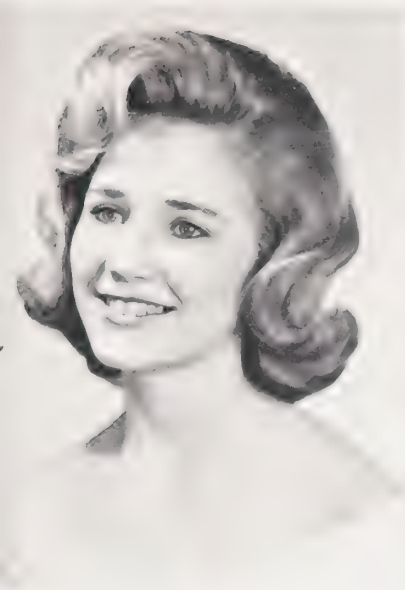

MISS EBBY SCHMULLING
Runner-up

Slacks, hoops, and heels symbolize the metamorphosis undergone by the 1964 beauty contestants. Weeks before the night of their debut, they began after-school practices clad in anything from cut-off blue jeans to bobby-pins. For experience in handling bouffant gowns, dress hoops were worn over their ultra-casual clothes to make unpromising ensembles for future beauty queens. At home, textbooks became the most popular head apparel as posture-conscious girls strained to walk gracefully.

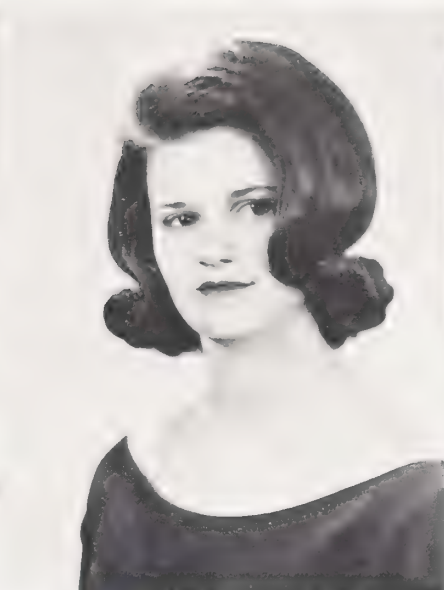

When rehearsals were finally over and last minute primping had ceased, fifty-seven jittery mademoiselles waited breathlessly backstage. Finally the curtain rose and Hickory High's loveliest glided beneath a miniature Arc de Triomphe onto a picturesque stage. Each brought the aura of France to P. E. Monroe Auditorium and enhanced the theme "An Evening in Paris."

THE PROM hitches dreams to stars.

"Old man winter" slowly melts into the background, bare trees blossom, and once again the world becomes green — spring has arrived, and, with new-born spring come highlights, happiness, and hilarity. The annual gaiety of this season is begun by the sentimentality of the Valentine's Day dance and continues through the formal splendor of the Junior - Senior Prom. These school dances remain not only as exciting events of the present, but happy memories for the future years.

May Makes Sap

As May-time temperatures rise, signs of the end of school begin to appear. Books are temporarily exchanged for the relaxation of mountain pools and beaches, while students revel in the summer sun. A host of parties and picnics fill a student's playtime schedule and disperse with study habits and homework.

While seniors vacate their H.H.S. home during senior week, ninth graders adopt it on Orientation Day. Farewells and greetings echo through the campus as upper and lower classmen exchange places.

Finding it difficult to completely wean away from the ties of childhood and memories of the past, seniors peddle their two-wheelers to school on the last day. Not to be outdone by their elders, the juniors don roller skates and park them in their lockers. From bicycles and roller skates to automobiles and Hondas, the last month of school marks a turning point—it is the end as well as the beginning.

OLD ROLLER skates become a teen fad.

Hickory High's Who's Who

It is difficult to isolate those elusive qualities which combine to set the leader apart from his peers. Each of the twelve seniors who has been chosen by the faculty as the most outstanding member of his class is distinct and separate in his accomplishments and ambitions. Yet, they are united by the unmistakable imprint of leadership. This quality is actually a subtle synthesis of many ingredients: achievement, success, drive, and a certain personal magnetism. Whether they have achieved prominence through their excellence in academics, leadership in club activities, or ability on the athletic field, each has been set apart by the greatness of his efforts. These twelve are the best of the class of 1965—they have earned the respect and admiration of their classmates and this, the highest honor which the school can bestow upon them.

A SMILE of disbelief from happy Kathy Norris greets Mrs. Klassett as she warmly congratulates a leaving student and wishes her luck in future college life.

Slowly the long line of gray-clad seniors walks toward the stage, traveling a distance far greater than the length of the aisle. For each step carries them farther from the world which has been theirs for the last three years—the high school years that hang in delicate balance between childhood and maturity. These magic years, unlike any others they will ever experience, have firmed them, prepared them, shaped them for this final event—their graduation.

For one brief, symbolic moment they stand poised on the threshold of a new world ahead as the spotlights illuminate their faces and diplomas are placed in their hands. Then, as they re-position their tassels and leave the stage, they move into new lives—lives in which their high school years remain as a bright imprint in memory and fond recollections of the past.

NOTES ABOUT THE BOOK

The 1965 HICKORY LOG was designed, printed and bound by Observer Printing House in Charlotte, North Carolina.

The cover was embossed by Kingskraft Press in Kingsport, Tenn.

The body of the book is set in 10 point Garamond bold with 8 point Garamond bold used for cut-lines. Foreword body text is 10 point Garamond bold. Headlines are 24 point Garamond bold, caps and lower case.

The paper stock is 100 pound Lustro Enamel Gloss.

The planning, the writing, the ad selling, are finished. The work is over and the golden anniversary LOG is proudly presented to you who people its pages. To those of us on the LOG staff, this book represents a major endeavor, and for seniors, it is a climax to many hours of hard work. It is our final achievement and with it goes the hope that each one of you will see this volume as a record in pictures and words of the personality of your school and of the personalities that have formed its character.

To the faculty and students of Hickory High go our thanks for their help and cooperation in the production of this book. Without the loyalty of our staff members and the invaluable guidance of our advisers, Mrs. Sigmon and Mrs. Summers, our efforts would have been futile.

Twirp Dances and basketball games, semester tests and elections will be recalled long after youthful enthusiasms are jaded, yet memories do fade and the classmates now in your mind as distinct personalities will become indistinct names. Therefore, we have attempted to record each event, include each student, and capture each emotion of the school year in this anniversary LOG. Take it then, with its many faces, its varied personalities. It is a composite of all of you—you who have made up the Sophomore Class, the Junior Class and the graduating class of 1965. Your year is captured between the covers of the 50th HICKORY LOG and this book will crystalize memories and refocus faces when they have dimmed.
